Process Overview

On the long side of the Nuance Concentrated Value Long-Short Fund (the Fund) investment portfolio, the Nuance Investment Team (the Investment Team) is looking for industry leading businesses with strong and stable competitive positions. Generally, these businesses have leading marketshares within their various areas of expertise, have strong balance sheets and exhibit rational capital allocation policies. The Investment Team is seeking to buy these businesses when they are under-earning their long-term potential due to cyclical and/or transitory issues, and when security valuations offer what we believe to be meaningful upside potential and reasonable support on the downside.

On the short side of the Fund investment portfolio, the Investment Team is looking for large businesses with more commoditized or structurally challenged competitive positions. These businesses may or may not be industry leaders. The Investment Team is seeking to sell these businesses when they are over-earning their long-term potential due to cyclical and/or transitory issues, and when security valuations offer what we believe to be reasonable support on the upside and meaningful downside potential.

The Investment Team continues to find attractive investment opportunities on both sides of the Fund's investment portfolio. As a point of reference, as of 3/31/17, the median company in the proprietary Nuance long universe, which consists of approximately 250 companies we view as industry leaders, was trading at roughly a 20% premium to what the Investment Team would consider to be fair value. In other words, the universe appears to be approximately 20% overvalued, on average, per our internal estimates.

As one can see from the table above, the Fund ended the quarter with a net 7.2% long equity exposure. On the long side of the portfolio, the Investment Team believes the opportunity set continues to narrow, as the stock prices of our 250 industry leaders have, on average, appreciated faster than our internal view of fair value over the last few years. However, investments with attractive risk/reward ratios can still be found within the Healthcare Equipment, Distillers & Vintners, and Oil & Gas Equipment & Services sub-industries, in our opinion. On the short side of the portfolio, the Investment Team believes the opportunity set continues to expand, with attractive short investments to be found within the Consumer Discretionary, Industrials, and Real Estate sectors.

Featured Investment

Short Waste Management (WM) – WM is the leading trash collection and disposal company in the US with approximately 25% market share. Average annual growth rates for both the entire industry's trash collection volumes, and specifically WM's trash collection volumes, have been negative over the last 15 years, lagging both population growth and the growth of the total US economy. The primary reason for this lag is the gradual adoption of recycling by consumers and businesses that has slowly taken market share from traditional trash landfill volumes. It is estimated that the US recycles an estimated 35% of its trash today, up from 29% in the early 2000's. The Investment Team believes this trend toward greater recycling will continue for the foreseeable future and thus considers trash collection and disposal to be a structurally challenged sub-industry of the economy. When this structural challenge is combined with WM's elevated Net Debt/EBITDAR ratio of just under 3x and the company's reasonably aggressive 60% dividend payout ratio, the Investment Team believes the competitive position of WM is average at best.

WM earned approximately $2.80 per share in the trailing 12-month period, and the Investment Team believes the company is over-earning its long-term potential for two key reasons. The first reason is related to the current level of WM's trash collection volumes. As highlighted above, WM has experienced negative growth in its volumes on average over the last 15 years. However, over this time frame there have been short, cyclical periods of positive growth. These periods tend to last a few years before reverting to the normal negative trend line. In 2016, WM's volumes grew almost 2% and are currently expected to grow another 1.5% in 2017. If instead volumes regressed lower to what we would consider a more normal, long-term level, then earnings per share would shrink in an exaggerated manner given the fixed cost nature of WM's business model. The second reason concerns WM's fuel costs. Fuel costs as a percent of trash collection revenues were at an all-time low of 3% in 2016, vs. a long-term average of 6%. This savings was driven primarily by the multi-year low diesel prices WM enjoyed throughout 2016. If fuel costs were to revert higher over the coming years, or conversely if the municipalities and businesses that WM contracts with were to demand that some, or all of the fuel savings be passed on to them in future contract negotiations, then WM's earnings per share would reset lower.

As of 3/31/17 WM was trading at $73 per share, representing a price to earnings multiple of almost 26x, which matches the all-time high for the company. The Investment Team believes this high multiple, when combined with the low growth nature of WM's structurally challenged business, leaves limited room for material price appreciation going forward. From a short seller's perspective, this implies the potential for limited downside. On the other hand, if the earnings per share of the company were to revert lower due to the factors mentioned above, and the price to earnings multiple were to contract to the 20-year average of 18x, then meaningful upside could be generated from shorting WM at these levels. This combination of limited downside potential and meaningful upside potential in a large, structurally challenged business is exactly what the Investment Team is looking for and explains why WM is a top short investment idea.

Mutual fund investing involves risk. Principal loss is possible. Investments in small and mid-capitalization companies involve additional risk such as limited liquidity and greater volatility than larger capitalization companies. Investments in foreign securities involve greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. The Fund is non-diversified, meaning it may concentrate its assets in fewer individual holdings than a diversified fund. Therefore, the Fund is more exposed to individual stock volatility than a diversified fund. Short sale of securities involves unlimited risk including the possibility that losses may exceed the original amount invested. However, a mutual fund investor's risk is limited to one's amount of investment in a mutual fund. The Fund is new with no operating history and there can be no assurance that the Fund will grow to or maintain an economically viable size, in which case the Trust's Board of Trustees ("Board of Trustees") may determine to liquidate the Fund.
